1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 This Court should deny Plaintiffs’ Motion for Leave to File a Motion for Reconsideration
3 (Dkt. No. 218) because the Court has already considered—and rejected—each argument Plaintiffs
4 invoke in their motion. Consequently, Plaintiffs fail to meet the requirements of Civil Local Rule 5 7-9(b).

6 II. ARGUMENT

7 Plaintiffs do not meet the requirements of either Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(3) (which forms
8 the bulk of their argument) or Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(1) (which they also include in passing).¹
9 (Dkt. No. 218 at 1.)

10 First, Plaintiffs argue under Rule 7-9(b)(3) that they are entitled to reconsideration
11 because the Court “failed to consider material facts and dispositive legal arguments.” (Id.) But 12 Plaintiffs’ supposed “dispositive legal argument” is a single out-of-circuit district court case that 13 the Court did consider—and subsequently rejected. And Plaintiffs’ additional accusation that the 14 Court failed to consider material facts is merely a disagreement with the Court’s analysis of the 15 material facts.

16 Second, Plaintiffs’ sole basis for alleging under Rule 7-9(b)(1) that a “material difference
17 in law exists from that which was presented to the Court before entry of the Order” (id.) is once
18 again an out-of-circuit district court case, and one that was readily available to Plaintiffs earlier in 19 the litigation.

20 Because none of these arguments is an appropriate basis to seek reconsideration under this 21 district’s local rules, the Court should deny Plaintiffs’ motion.

22 A. Plaintiffs Do Not Meet the Requirements of Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(3)

23 1. Plaintiffs have not shown a manifest failure by the Court to consider 24 material facts that were presented to the Court

25 a. Does 3 & 4

26 Plaintiffs have not alleged a manifest failure by the Court to consider material facts related 27 to Does 3 and 4 that were presented to the Court before the order at issue in this motion. Instead,

28 ¹ Plaintiffs do not seek to file a motion for reconsideration pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(2).

1 Plaintiffs merely disagree with the Court’s application of the law to material facts. This
2 disagreement is not, however, an appropriate basis under Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(3) to seek 3 reconsideration.

4 In their motion, Plaintiffs admit that they have not alleged any outputs of Does 3 and 4’s
5 code, identical or otherwise, as they did for Does 1, 2 and 5. (Dkt. No. 218 at 4 (“Plaintiffs did
6 not make equivalent allegations of code examples for Does 3 and 4”).) They emphasize that the 7 Court held that these facts were sufficient to state a Section 1202(b) claim in its order granting in 8 part and denying in part Defendants’ first motion to dismiss. (Id. (referencing Dkt. No. 95).) But 9 at that point, the Court had not yet considered the identity requirement. (Dkt. No. 189 at 8 &
10 n.8 (describing the identity requirement as “not previously resolved”).) After doing so in its 11 order granting in part and denying in part Defendants’ second motion to dismiss, the Court found
12 the same facts to be insufficient and accordingly dismissed Does 3 and 4’s Section 1202(b)
13 claims. (Id. at 16.)

14 Plaintiffs now seek to ignore the Court’s considered application of the law. (Dkt. No. 218
15 at 4 (arguing that the Court had found the “unchanged allegations” sufficient, prior to addressing 16 the identity requirement).) Plaintiffs invoke no unconsidered material facts or “missed 17 arguments” to support this position. (See id. at 4-5 (citing Sheet Metal Workers Nat’l Pension
18 Fund v. Bayer Aktiengesellschaft, No. 20-CV-04737-RS, 2021 WL 5302525, at *1 (N.D. Cal 19 Nov. 15, 2021)).) Instead, Plaintiffs focus on a “salient difference” between Does 1, 2, and 5 on 20 the one hand, and Does 3 and 4 on the other: that while the former admittedly pleaded facts that 21 failed to meet Section 1202(b)’s identity requirement, the latter pleaded no facts about the 22 output of their code at all. (Id. at 4.) According to Plaintiffs, this absence of facts ought to have 23 been sufficient to state a Section 1202(b) claim. (Id. at 5.) But the Court expressly considered the 24 absence of facts alleging output of Does 3 and 4’s code. (Dkt. No. 189 at 6 (“Does 3 and 4 have 25 again failed to raise instances in which their code was output by Copilot”).) And, of course,
26 because identifying non-identical code in outputs is insufficient, identifying no code at all is even 27 less sufficient. Thus, Plaintiffs do not even argue that the Court manifestly failed to consider
28 material facts; rather, they appear to argue that the Court wrongly applied the law to material

1 facts. Plaintiffs’ avenue for relief is to bring an appeal before the Ninth Circuit at the appropriate
 2 time, not to bring a motion for reconsideration now.

3 b. Doe 5

4 Plaintiffs also argue that the Court failed to consider material facts related to Doe 5’s
 5 allegations of identical output. Their argument fails for the simple reason that even Plaintiffs
 6 admit that the Court did, in fact, consider these facts. (Dkt. No. 218 at 4-6 (“The Court even 7 acknowledged another instance of identical output from Doe 5”).) As Plaintiffs’ own motion
 8 acknowledges, “[m]otions for reconsideration are designed to bring to the Court’s attention clear 9 instances of missed arguments, not to simply make the very same points, but more loudly.” (Id. at 10 4-5 (citing Sheet Metal Workers Nat’l Pension Fund, 2021 WL 5302525, at *1).) Where 11 Plaintiffs cite the Court’s specific consideration of the material fact they claim was not
 12 considered, there can be no such “missed argument.” (Id.)

13 Moreover, after considering Doe 5’s allegations, the Court rejected them. (Dkt. No. 189 at 14 3-4, 15 (“[T]he examples Plaintiffs provide with respect to Does 1, 2, and 5 . . . [are] not sufficient 15 for a Section 1202(b) claim”).) The Court was correct to do so because Plaintiffs characterized 16 the copying as non-identical in their Complaint—and, in fact, even as to Doe 5, there was no
 17 showing of identical output of any entire work. (Dkt. No. 97-3 ¶¶ 113-120 (“Copilot Outputs the 18 Code of Doe 5 in Modified Format”) (emphasis added); id. ¶¶ 121-128 (“Copilot Outputs the 19 Code of Doe 5 Essentially Verbatim”) (emphasis added).) Nothing Plaintiffs say in their motion
 20 warrants a reconsideration of that conclusion. (Dkt. No. 189 at 15 (noting that the Court “agrees
 21 with Defendants that [Doe 5’s allegations contain] a ‘fundamental defect’ ‘endemic to Plaintiffs’
 22 theory of [Section] 1202(b) liability.’”)).)

23 2. Plaintiffs have not shown a manifest failure by the Court to consider
 24 dispositive legal arguments that were presented to the Court

25 Plaintiffs incorrectly argue that they meet the requirements of Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(3)
 26 because this Court manifestly failed to consider their legal argument that identical copies are not 27 required to bring a DMCA claim. (Dkt. No. 218 at 4-5.) But the Court considered—and 28 rejected—that argument when it found that “Section 1202(b) claims require that copies be

1 identical.” (Dkt. No. 189 at 14.) Plaintiffs even admitted as much in their opposition to 2 OpenAI’s motion to dismiss, where they declared that “[g]iven the amount of ink spilled, it is
 3 plain that this argument has been considered.” (Dkt. No. 141 at 14.)

4 Plaintiffs’ argument appears to be that the Court failed to find persuasive a single out-of-
 5 circuit case cited by Plaintiffs. (Dkt. No. 218 at 5 (citing GC2 v. Int’l Game Tech., 391 F. Supp.
 6 3d 828 (N.D. Ill. 2019).) As a preliminary matter, GC2 is neither “directly on point” (id.) nor 7 dispositive. That case concerned artwork that was used “in its entirety.” GC2, 391 F. Supp. 3d at 8 844. The court there explicitly distinguished cases—like this one—that allege only reproductions
 9 of portions of the protected works. Id. at 843-44 (distinguishing Fischer v. Forrest, 286 F. Supp.
 10 3d 590 (S.D.N.Y. 2018), and Faulkner Press, LLC v. Class Notes, LLC, 756 F. Supp. 2d 1352
 11 (N.D. Fla. 2010)).

12 In any event, the Court’s choice not to cite GC2 in its decision is not a basis for 13 reconsideration. “[A] court’s failure to discuss a particular issue in its opinion does not 14 necessarily mean that the court did not consider the question.” Pom Wonderful LLC v. Purely 15 Juice, Inc., 277 F. App’x 744, 747 (9th Cir. 2008). Indeed, courts are “not required to discuss 16 every case that a party cites in support of its position,” and a failure to do so “does not 17 demonstrate a failure to consider dispositive legal arguments.” Apotex Inc. v. Gilead Scis., Inc.,
 18 No. 18-cv-06475-JCS, 2019 WL 2410468, at *2 (N.D. Cal. June 7, 2019). Rather, the Court cited
 19 three Ninth Circuit district court cases—one of which was affirmed on appeal—to support its 20 conclusion that a Section 1202(b) claim requires CMI removal or alteration from an identical 21 copy of a copyrighted work. (Dkt. No. 189 at 15 (citing Advanta-STAR Auto. Rsch. Corp. of Am.
 22 v. Search Optics, LLC, No. 22-CV-1186 TWR (BLM), 2023 WL 3366534, at *12 (S.D. Cal. May 23 9, 2023); Kirk Kara Corp. v. W. Stone & Metal Corp., No. CV 20- 1931-DMG, 2020 WL
 24 5991503, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2020); and Frost-Tsuji Architects v. Highway Inn, Inc., No.
 25 CIV. 13-00496 SOM, 2015 WL 263556, at *3 (D. Haw. Jan. 21, 2015), aff’d, 700 F. App’x 674
 26 (9th Cir. 2017).)

27 In short, the Court’s decision to rely on in-circuit authority “makes clear that the Court did 28 not (and does not) find [the out-of-circuit case] to be dispositive.” See Apotex, 2019 WL 2410468

at *2. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have not shown a manifest failure to consider a dispositive legal argument.

B. Plaintiffs Do Not Meet the Requirements of Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(1)

1. Plaintiffs have not shown that a material difference in law exists²

Plaintiffs do not raise any new law in the body of their motion. Plaintiffs do cite, for the first time and in a footnote, ADR International Ltd. v. Institute for Supply Management, Inc., 667 F. Supp. 3d 411 (S.D. Tex. 2023). (See Dkt. No. 218 at 5 n.1.) To the extent that this out-of-circuit district court decision is Plaintiffs’ attempt to argue a material difference in law from that previously presented to the Court, it too fails.

As a threshold matter, “there must be a change in the ‘controlling law’” to justify a motion for reconsideration. Samet v. Procter & Gamble Co., No. 5:12-CV-1891-PSG, 2014 WL 1782821, at *2 (N.D. Cal. May 5, 2014) (quoting Kona Enters., Inc. v. Est. of Bishop, 229 F.3d 877, 890 (9th Cir. 2000)) (emphasis added). ADR is from a district court in the Fifth Circuit, not the Ninth Circuit, where courts have consistently held that the DMCA has an identity requirement. (Dkt. No. 189 at 15 (citing Advanta-STAR Auto. Rsch. Corp. of Am., 2023 WL 3366534, at *12; Kirk Kara Corp., 2020 WL 5991503, at *6; and Frost-Tsuji Architects, 2015 WL 263556, at *3).) At most, to the extent ADR supports Plaintiffs’ position here, it is best understood as an out-of-circuit outlier that runs counter to the prevailing Ninth Circuit law and thus is not sufficient to show a material difference in law. The “mere addition of a new voice in the chorus of trial judges does not create such a binding precedent.” See Samet, 2014 WL 1782821, at *2. If one additional out-of-circuit district court case cited in a footnote were sufficient to justify a motion for reconsideration, “the court and the parties could become so enmeshed in reconsidering things that these cases would never actually get off the ground.” Id. As such, Plaintiffs have not shown that a material difference in law exists to meet the requirements Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(1).

² Plaintiffs’ motion does not argue that a material difference in fact exists from that presented to the Court before entry of the Court’s Order. Accordingly, this response does not address that portion of Local Rule 7-9(b)(1).

1 2. Plaintiffs have not shown that in the exercise of reasonable diligence
 2 they did not know of such law at the time of the Court's Order

3 Even if the Court finds that ADR qualifies as a “material difference of law”—it does not—
 4 Plaintiffs also fail to explain why, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, it could not have
 5 presented it in its opposition to OpenAI’s motion to dismiss. This failure independently dooms
 6 Plaintiffs’ motion because a “motion for reconsideration may not be used to raise arguments . . .
 7 when they could reasonably have been raised earlier in the litigation.” Rodriguez v. Barrita, Inc.,
 8 No. C 09-04057 RS, 2014 WL 556044, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 10, 2014) (quoting Marlyn
 9 Nutraceuticals, Inc. v. Mucos Pharma GmbH & Co., 571 F.3d 873, 880 (9th Cir. 2009)).

10 Here, Plaintiffs had ample opportunity to make the arguments asserted in their current 11 motion earlier in the litigation. Indeed, Plaintiffs admit they expressly chose not to make these 12 arguments. (Dkt. No. 218 at 3 (deeming further argument “unnecessary”).) All the law raised in 13 their current motion was readily available when Plaintiffs opposed Defendants’ motion to 14 dismiss. Plaintiffs acknowledge that they briefed GC2 earlier in the litigation. (See id. at 5.)
 15 And the court in ADR entered its decision on March 30, 2023, nearly three months before OpenAI
 16 filed its second motion to dismiss in this case (Dkt. No. 109-3) and nearly four months before 17 Plaintiffs filed their opposition (Dkt. No. 141). Because Plaintiffs have not shown that any 18 supposed material difference in law was reasonably outside of their knowledge at the time of the 19 previous order, Plaintiffs’ motion does not meet the requirements of Civil Local Rule 7-9(b)(1).
 20 Gonzales v. Apttus Corp., No. 21-cv-01844-JCS, 2022 WL 3925292, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 21 2022) (denying motion pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-9 where movant “has not shown that any 22 relevant facts or law were outside her knowledge despite reasonable diligence at the time of the 23 previous order”).

24 III. CONCLUSION

25 For the foregoing reasons, OpenAI respectfully requests that this Court deny Plaintiffs’
 26 motion for leave to file a motion for reconsideration.
